13 society; and

14 WHEREAS, for generations, women have resolved
15 conflicts in their homes, schools, and communities; they have

17 to restore respect, establish justice, and reduce the causes 18 of conflict as the surest way to peace; and

19 WHEREAS, from legal defense and public education, to 20 direct action and civil disobedience, women have expanded the 21 American tradition of using inclusive, democratic, and active 22 means to reduce violence, achieve peace, and promote the 23 common good; and

24 WHEREAS, the drive for nonviolent change has been 25 championed by visionary women who have consciously built
